Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

SITUATION SUMMARY

Northern California Weather of Concern

- Dry and warming weather is expected this week. Locally breezy north to east winds are anticipated during the middle of the week as high pressure rebuilds across the region. Daytime highs will be above normal Thursday through Saturday. A Freeze Warning is in effect overnight, tonight for portions of northeastern California, as crisp overnight lows will develop in many areas as winds subside and a cool, dry airmass allows efficient radiational cooling with the longer nights of autumn.

Southern California Weather of Concern

- A ridge of high pressure will build over Southern California Thursday through Sunday. This, in addition to offshore flow, will result in hot daytime temperatures and drier weather conditions through Sunday.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories: http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/wwwa_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Dry and warm conditions will persist for the next several days as a strong ridge of high pressure settles over the region into the weekend.

San Francisco Weather:

Very warm to hot temperatures are expected to persist through the weekend as strong high pressure remains over the west coast. Some relief from the heat is expected Saturday and Sunday near the coast then cooling inland to near seasonal averages by the first half of the upcoming workweek.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

Dry and warm weather expected through next week under prominent high pressure ridge over the west coast. There will be a slow warming trend through the weekend then slightly cooler going through next week.

Hanford Weather:

A ridge of high pressure aloft will bring sunny days and clear nights into early next week with unseasonably warm afternoon temperatures.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Strong high pressure aloft and weak offshore flow will persist over the forecast area keeping much of Southern California very hot and dry over the next few days. High pressure will begin to weaken early next week initially bringing some cooling across the coastal areas early next week then cooler inland by midweek. Night through morning low clouds will return early next week to the coastal areas.

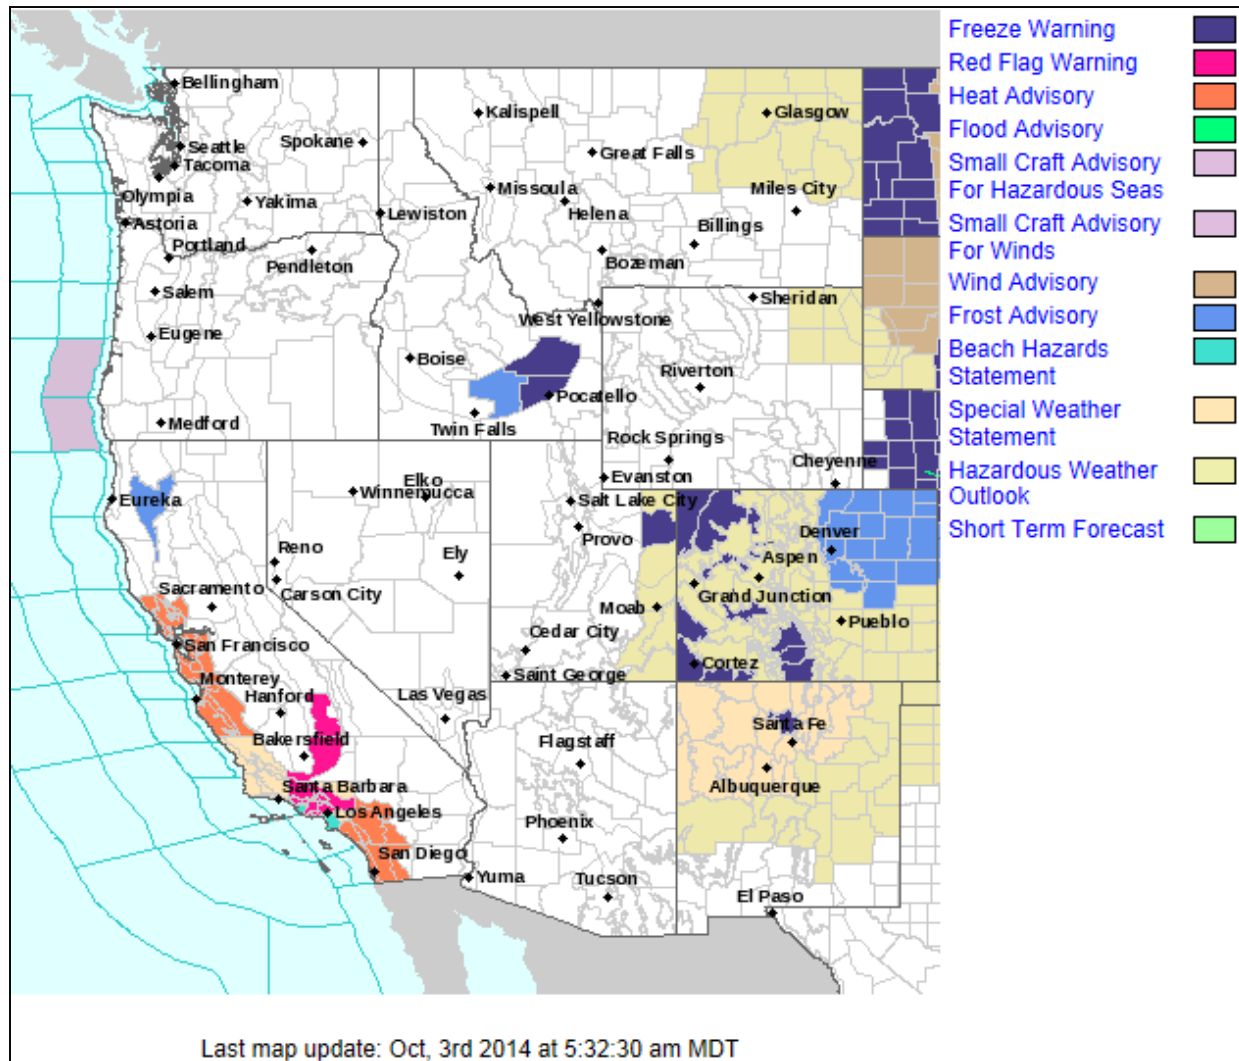

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

High pressure building over the region and weak offshore flow will continue the warming trend across southern California through this weekend. A low pressure trough moving across the area next week will help lower highs to near normal by the middle of next week. Night and morning low clouds will return along the coast next week. Elevated surf and strong rip currents will take place at the beaches through this weekend.

Southeast California Weather:

A persistent high pressure ridge building into the region will lead to a warming trend for the rest of the week with above normal temperatures peaking on Saturday with only slight cooling expected on Sunday. Weakening high pressure next week will result in a very slow cooling trend towards more normal readings for early October.
